Dave Paulson, PhD
Candidate Temple University Department of Anthropology

Studies of language endangerment have demonstrated how processes of urbanization and rural to urban migration have negatively affected the survival of the world's endangered languages. Through an investigation of both informal and institutionally organized interactions, this study analyzes how rural-urban migration among young people in the Cham community affords them with new and sometimes contradictory opportunities for the acquisition of their endangered language, and what this suggests for how urban-rural spaces create one another in the process.

Dave Paulson is a PhD Candidate in the Department of Anthropology at Temple University.

About the Global Education Colloquium

The GEC is composed of faculty, students and community members who make global education their central focus for research and teaching, and those who incorporate global and education analysis into their areas of primary pursuit.

GEC events are held every month on the main campus of Drexel University. You are invited to bring your lunch.

Event will be webcast live through the website.

REGISTRATION IS ENCOURAGED: drexel.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_068EY59BUT2ALuB
