LEARNING IN THE AGE OF COVID-19

Fresh perspectives and new competencies in leveraging Learning Technologies during and after the COVID-19 pandemic

A two-part webinar series for educators and parents hosted by Dr. William Lynch, Professor of Learning Technologies, Drexel University School of Education

PART ONE

Teaching, Technology, and Social Justice in the Age of COVID-19

Thursday, October 1, 2020 at 3:00 p.m. ET

In part one of the webinar series, the current and post-COVID-19 world of learning in urban, suburban, and rural settings will be discussed, with a special focus on social justice.

The presenter will also review ways to build learning experiences based on effective communication technologies, how to stimulate participation in meaningful conversations to develop the learner's voice, and how to develop anti-racist and anti-hate messages and activities as part of virtual and blending learning experiences.

PART TWO

Teaching and Learning from Home for Educators and Parents, Now and in the Future

Thursday, October 8, 2020 at 3:00 p.m. ET

In part two of the webinar series, you will learn ways to leverage the current and post-COVID-19 world of virtual and blended learning at home in urban, suburban, and rural settings.

The presenter will discuss how to create and utilize a home learning environment, inexpensive devices and apps to supplement core technology resources, how to use the world as a living laboratory, managing multiple learners at home, and resources for learners with special needs.
