Integrating School Psychology Practice and Research in Community Settings

Thursday, October 22, 2020 | 7:00 p.m. ET

During this virtual event, you will hear from practicing school psychologists who work in a variety of community settings where the intersection of pediatrics, behavioral health, education and integrated care meet to ensure a holistic view of the child, and to address education and behavioral health needs within an interdisciplinary team approach.

The integration of school psychologists in community settings, including clinics, pediatric offices and medical homes, offers unique opportunities for co-curricular learning opportunities with medical school students, behavior analysts, psychiatrists and developmental pediatricians. The presenters will also share information and answer questions about Drexel University's hybrid EdS in School Psychology program.
