

The School of Education and the Office of International Programs at Drexel University presents

Global Education Colloquium (GEC) Brown Bag Lunch Series

[What's "Special" about Special Education Policy? The Politics of Perception in Egypt]

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 2021

12:00 pm – 1:00 pm ET

FEATURED SPEAKER

Alia Ammar
Drexel University

This presentation introduces the different laws pertaining to the education of differently-abled students in Egypt, and examines how perceptions of those laws impact implementation, particularly at the school level. Data was collected over a three-month period in two phases (phase one: survey specifically designed for this study; phase two: participant interviews) and contextualized through personal experience as a school-level teacher in Egypt for six years.

Alia A. Ammar is a PhD Candidate in Drexel's School of Education. She is passionate about education, equity, and English Language and Literature teaching.

About the Global Education Colloquium

The GEC is composed of faculty, students and community members who make global education their central focus for research and teaching, and those who incorporate global and education analysis into their areas of primary pursuit.

To register for the event, visit <https://drexel.zoom.us/meeting/register/tZclc-Grpz0sHtCnXKJ-eJSJrMCwssPD9-fx> or click the button above. Log-in information will be sent to those who register.

For more information, call 215-895-0900, email ajh357@drexel.edu or visit drexel.edu/soe/GEC.

DREXEL UNIVERSITY School of Education

south asia center

MIDDLE EAST CENTER

DREXEL UNIVERSITY
Office of Global Engagement and Education Abroad