

2024 Sociology Film Series

We invite you to watch and discuss three documentaries that showcase the rich history of, and growing movement amongst, Native-American people to reclaim their spiritual, political, and cultural identity. These films showcase Native-Americans' steadfast resilience in the face of adversity and ask us to consider how our national legacy of genocide, and discrimination shapes our contemporary struggle for racial justice. Our discussions will involve themes of political and social advocacy, intergenerational trauma, and cultural identity.

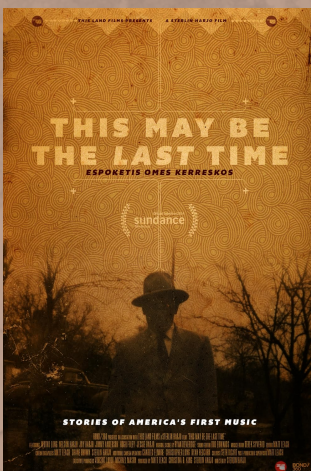

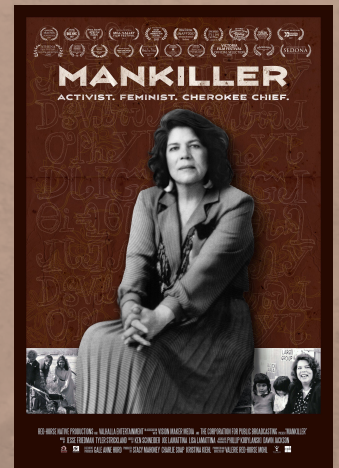

Gather

Wednesday, January 24, 6-8pm

Mankiller

Wednesday, February 7, 6-8pm

This May Be The Last Time

Wednesday, February 21, 6-8pm

All screenings are in-person, and (tentatively) located in 3101 Market Street (Rm. 224). Pizza and beverages will be served.

To RSVP for a screening, please email Meghan Hamilton at ms5429@drexel.edu