Customizing Mentoring for your Professional Development

Open to Faculty and Grad Students!

How to design your Personal Board of Advisors?

Join Dr. Rajashi Ghosh, Associate Professor of Human Resource Development (HRD) and Department Chair of the Policy, Organization, and Leadership (POL) department, for a brown bag lunch workshop about how to take a self-directed approach to managing your career through mentoring.

Mentoring is an important tool that imparts portable skills, knowledge, and abilities needed for one's career advancement across organizational boundaries.

This talk will share the latest research and practice of different types of Mentoring Models (e.g., Traditional and Relational Dyadic Mentoring, Developmental Networks with Senior, Peer, Reverse Mentors from professional and personal life domains, Mentoring Episodes), challenges inherent in Diversified Mentoring Relationships, and critical issues concerning E-mentoring. Knowledge about the unique value of each type of Mentoring Model and associated benefits and challenges will enable attendees to be proactive and self-directed in assembling their own Personal Board of Advisors.
